

Jeff Garascia

Chief Innovation Officer
Marmon Holdings, Inc.
Jeff.Garascia@marmon.com

Jeff Garascia has been Chief Innovation Officer of Marmon Holdings, Inc. since 2017. In this position, Jeff advises presidents of Marmon's 11 operating groups to help stimulate innovation in their businesses, create new ideas and approaches, and identify innovation talent. Additionally, he is responsible for various think tank initiatives, the Marmon Innovation Council, and the Marmon Patent Society.

Jeff was previously Senior Vice President, Growth & Innovation for Marmon Beverage Technologies, leading strategy and innovation teams in areas including engineering, product management, marketing, and consumer research, as well as Marmon's research and development center in India.

Before joining Marmon in 2013, Jeff spent seven years with Scotts Miracle-Gro in senior management positions in global strategy, R&D, and business development. He previously was with the Booz, Allen & Hamilton consulting firm for eight years in progressive roles culminating in his appointment as a Principal in the firm.

Jeff earned a B.S. in Electrical Engineering from the University of Houston and a M.S. and Ph.D. in Industrial Engineering, both from the University of Cincinnati.

Marmon Holdings, Inc., a Berkshire Hathaway company, is a global industrial engineering organization comprising more than 100 autonomous manufacturing and service businesses, organized within 11 groups. Marmon's 20,000-plus team members serve diverse industries and markets worldwide from more than 400 facilities in 23 countries. Annual revenues total $10 billion.