

Alan G. Bunte

Co-founder, former COO and Board Director
Commvault

Al Bunte is a co-founder of Commvault, a leading provider of data protection and data management software. He retired from the company's chief operating officer position in 2019 and stepped down as board director in 2020. He is currently a private investor, providing seed funding for several projects.

As Commvault COO, Bunte was responsible for product development, product management, pricing, marketing, field and professional tech services, planning, M&A, and business and strategy development.

Prior to joining Commvault in 1999, he served as senior vice president of planning and business development for the Norand Corporation from 1986 to January 1998. He previously spent several years working for Andersen Consulting building and deploying IT systems.

Bunte has more than 30 years of experience in business, product innovation and strategy development, and operations within the IT industry. He holds more than 50 patents.

Along with serving on the Tippie Advisory Board, Bunte is also a member of board for the John Pappajohn Entrepreneurial Center at the University of Iowa.

Al received a BBA and an MBA from the University of Iowa. He and his wife, Diane, currently reside in Fort Myers, Florida.
